THE SECRETARY OF STATE
WASHINGTON

November 22, 1985

~~SECRET~~

Dear Bill:

In response to your letter of October 10, I will be pleased to join you in notifying the intelligence oversight committees of the formal establishment of a review of the technical security of all elements of U.S. missions worldwide.

The Department of State has embarked on a twenty-four point program to improve the technical and procedural security programs at all Eastern European posts; this plan has been presented to the Overseas Security Policy Group on which the DCI is represented. There have also been three separate Technical Security Countermeasures efforts within recent months in which State, CIA, and NSA have participated. These joint efforts, along with coordination on National Security Decision Directive 196, and the restructuring of our security organizations and technical surveillance countermeasures staffs, are testimony to the excellent cooperation that exists between State and CIA on security matters.

To supplement these security improvements, we propose a review of the technical security of all elements within U.S. missions worldwide. We seek full participation by CIA and NSA, not only in these vulnerability assessments, but also assistance in developing durable and effective methods for improving and sustaining our long-term capability against penetration activities by foreign intelligence services.

The Honorable
William J. Casey,
Director,
Central Intelligence Agency.

In view of this Department's responsibility for security at overseas missions, State's new Bureau of Diplomatic Security will provide overall direction for the security reviews. Robert Lamb, the Director of the Bureau of Diplomatic Security, will represent me in this matter.

I would propose that we notify the Intelligence Oversight Committee of our agreement and our intention to develop a plan of action.

Sincerely yours,
